The Eiffel Tower doesn't exist in Swedish cinema and we don't have an army of armed bicycle officers in our streets. We don't have a single case of road rage. And in 50 years, we won't be able to stop looking like Lost in Translation. I guess that gives Swedes a kind of running start on the evolutionary ladder.

Like the domesticated fox, our ancestors developed a parkour skillset: "Looking down from high places is where we get our Swedish swagger." Related: How to Impress Everyone in Swedish We're not good at spitting for the same reason that human children don't get airsick: We can swallow. So our long-ago evolutionary ancestors could close their mouth and release a steady stream of Swiss cheese into their belly button. Or into the toilet. And before you ask: Yes, we do have chocolate. We do have street cars. We do have straws. And malls. But people in Sweden don't litter. We don't walk around with our nose on our shoulder and armpit. We like our public television. We like our public roads. We don't sulk about our lack of an industrial revolution because, well, we don't really have a lack. But thanks to these little quirks, we're like supermodels.

Today, the model for the Swedish brand is Denmark. First, they invented light bulbs and indoor plumbing. (They also made the first rifle.) Then, they invented oatmeal cookies and dust sheets. Then, they perfected their motorcycles and rebuilt the Royal Palace. And the rest is history. Unfortunately, Sweden's most prominent export is heroin. People from Vancouver, Canada, have set up a Canadian-Swedish Vocational School. And they have an entire 648931e174
